

ADVERTISING PROFESSIONAL OR OCCUPATIONAL SERVICES IN HAWAII:

WHAT PUBLISHERS & PRODUCERS SHOULD KNOW...

The Regulated Industries Complaints Office (RICO) enforces State licensing laws that govern the practice of 45 professions, occupations, and programs. For many of these professions and occupations, the professional or vocational licensing laws include advertising restrictions. As an advertising publisher or producer, you should know that...

- ❖ You can verify whether a person or business is currently licensed or registered by checking the licensing website at <http://pahoe.hoe.ehawaii.gov/pvl/app> or by contacting the Consumer Resource Center at 587-3222.

- ❖ A person is prohibited from advertising that the person is a contractor, from advertising in a manner that implies that the person is a licensed contractor, or from advertising that the person is able to perform contracting work in amounts over $1,000 UNLESS the person has a valid contractor's license in all areas advertised.

- ❖ A person who performs contracting work amounting to $1,000 or LESS (including labor, materials and taxes) is not required to have a contractor's license; except, however, where a building permit is required, for electrical, plumbing, or elevator mechanic work, or when the work is part of a larger project or operation.

- ❖ Advertisements concerning contractors, pest control operators, massage therapists, motor vehicle repair, detective & guards, and real estate appraisers must contain the practitioner's current license number.
- ❖ For advertisements concerning contractors, pest control operators, and massage therapists, licensees are required to provide proof to the publisher or producer that they hold a valid license number. Absent such proof, the publisher or producer is required to refuse to publish or produce the advertisement.

- ❖ A professional or vocational license or registration is required for persons or businesses practicing or advertising as practitioners within the following professions and occupations. In addition, a professional or vocational license or registration is required for persons who advertise within certain
